This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Seminar paper from the year 2011 in the subject Business economics - Accounting and Taxes, grade: 1, Stockholm School of Economics (Accounting Faculty), language: English, abstract: Diverging views on the attribute of 'comparability. for financial reporting under IFRS Six guest lectures at Stockholm School of Economics passed by and one word left a permanent mark on my mind. With a high regularity and consensus the representatives of different interest groups involved in financial reporting mentioned 'comparability., sometimes referred to as 'consistency. or 'continuity., as one particularly important attribute of good financial reporting. Heurlin (2011, p. 8/12), as an IASB member, stressed the need to acknowledge consistency in financial reporting, which he regards as a proxy for good financial reporting. Scheja (2011), in his auditor role, stated that PwC has a major focus in auditing on ensuring comparability of financial reporting, i.e. by preventing the usage of non-GAAP measures for earnings management. According to him, the attribute of relevance is mainly ensured by preparers. Also, Gerentz (2011) mentioned the term comparability twice; first, stating that NCC aims at...
