By John V Van Sickle

Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Planning for the South: An Inquiry Into the Economics of Regionalism Why are economic rewards so much lower in the South than in other parts of the country? This question was drawn forcibly to the attention of the nation by the Report on Economic Conditions of the South in which President Roosevelt, in a foreword, characterized the area as the Nation's No. 1 economic problem. The present volume, which attempts to answer this question, is a plea for regionalism by a man without a region. My residence in the South dates from September, 1938. With the exception of the first eight years of my life in Colorado and the next eleven in Baltimore, I have never spent more than five years in any one place; more than ten years were spent in various parts of Europe. My regionalism is thus intellectual rather than emotional. Nor is it the result of any sudden conversion. Are there any students who were privileged to sit under Frederic Jackson Turner who are not regionalists? His lectures made a deep...
